Heinkel He 46C

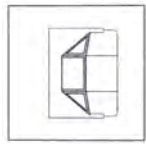

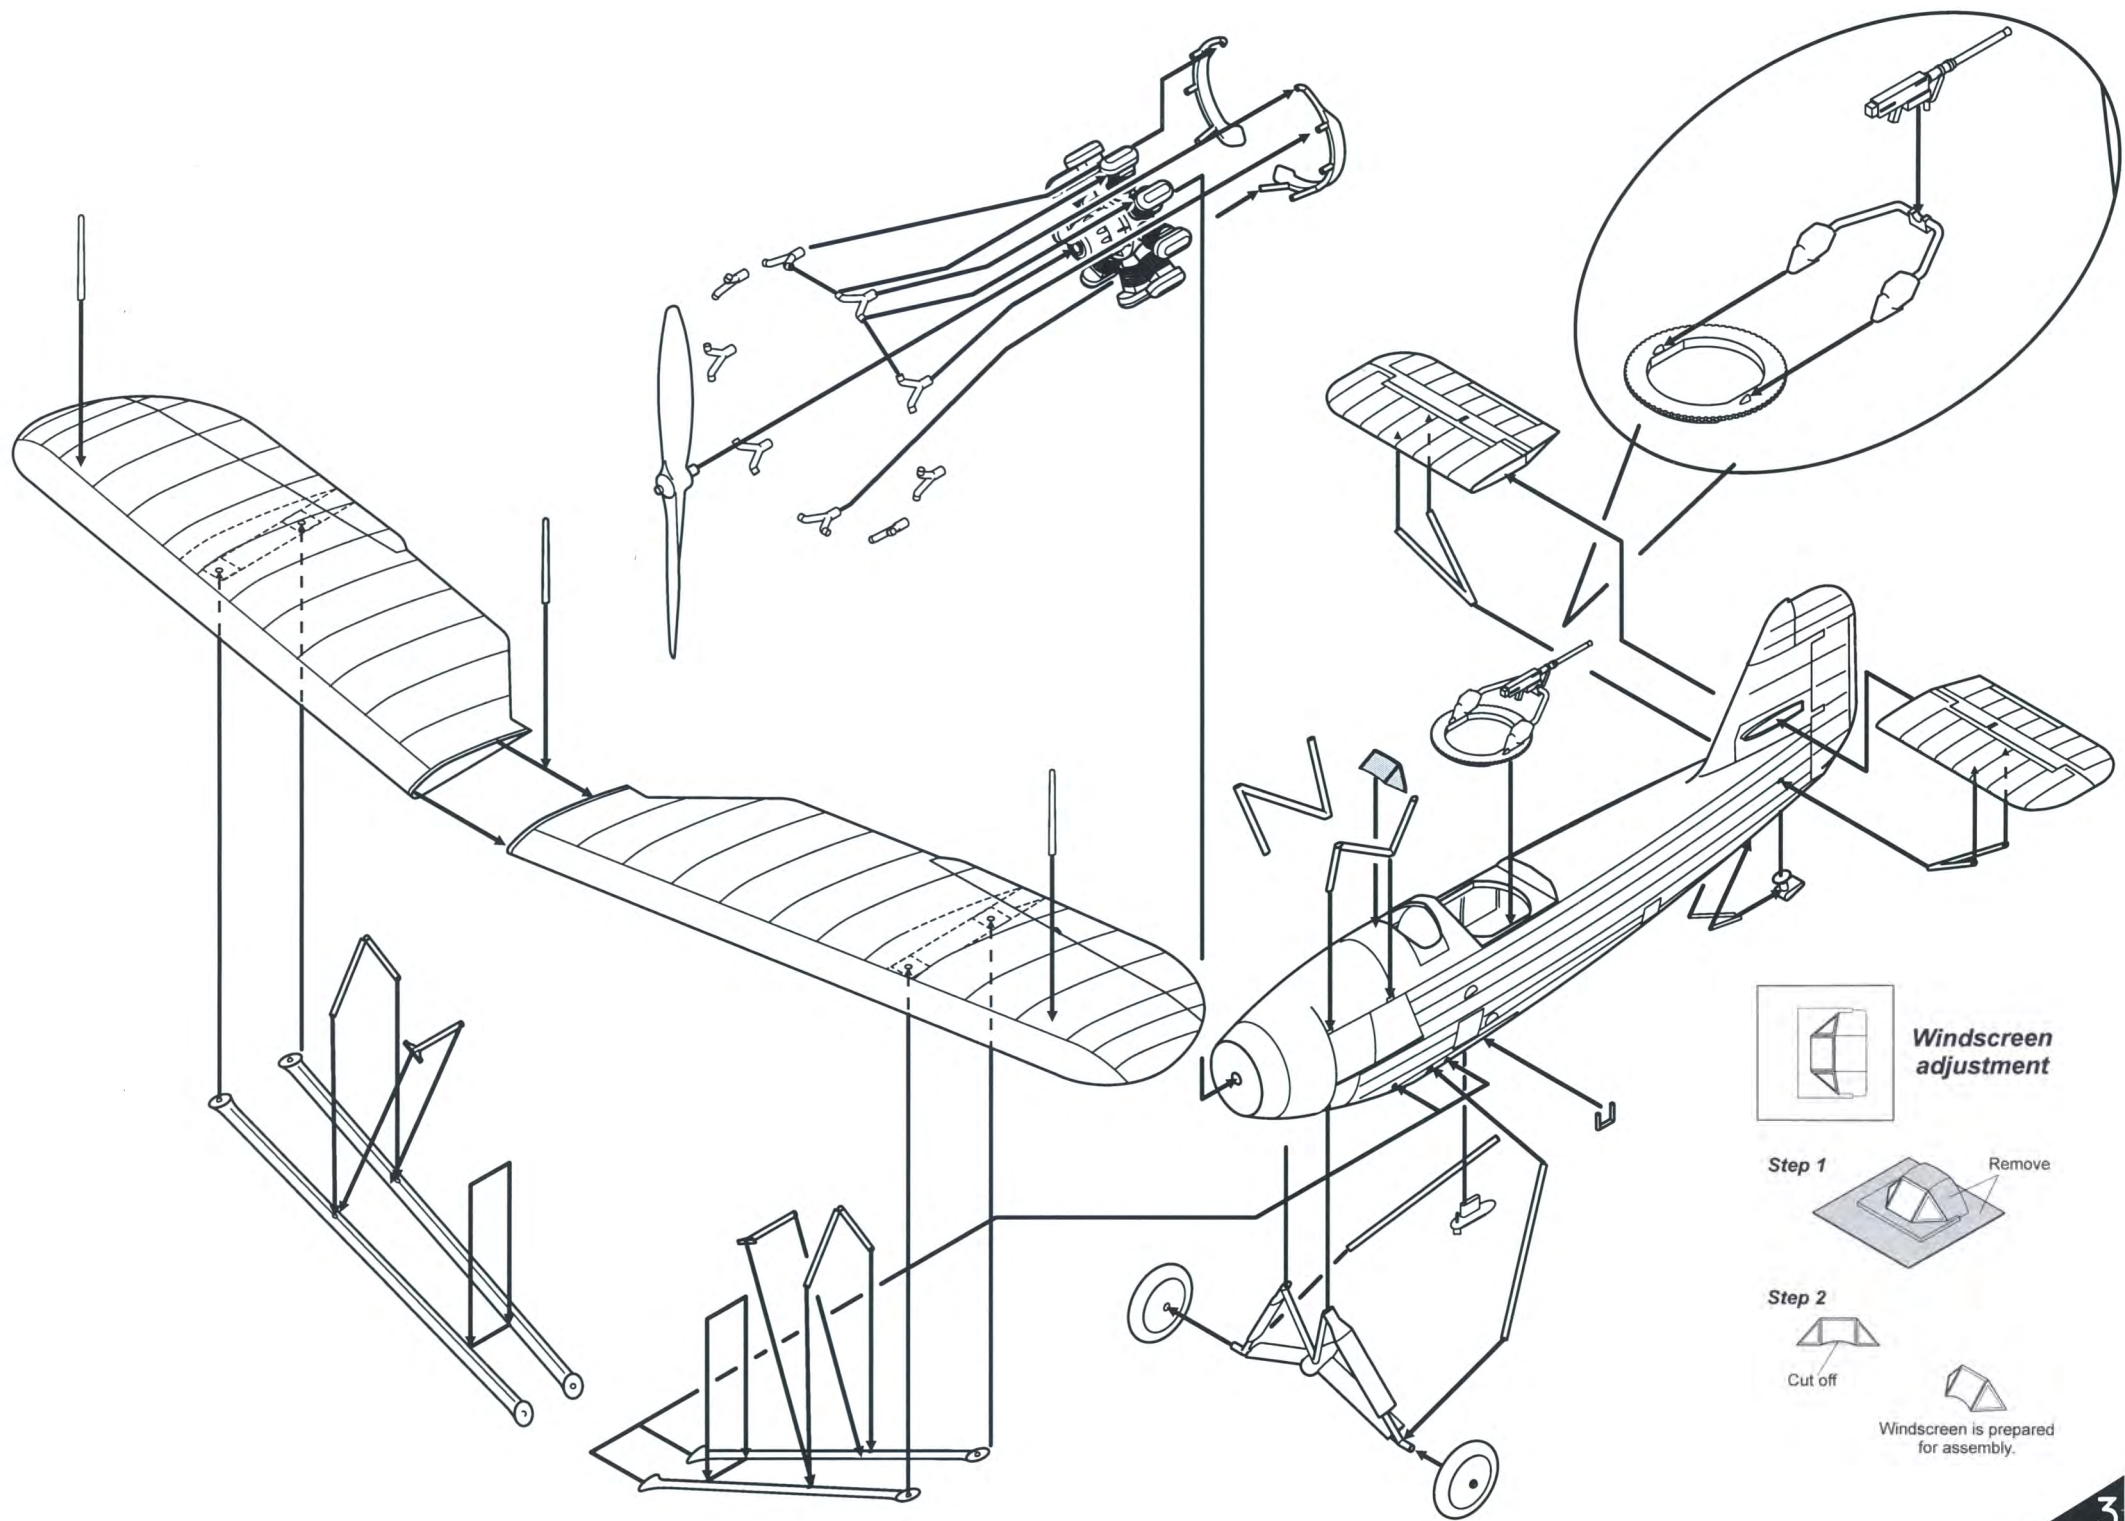

V roce 1933 vznikl hornoplošník He 46C. Byla objednána sériová výroba, celkem byl vyroben 481 kus včetně prototypů. Byly dodány jednotkám Luftwaffe, sloužily jako pozorovací a cvičné stroje. Dvacet strojů He 46C zakoupili v roce 1936 povstalecké síly generála Franca ve Španělsku. V roce 1938 už byly He 46C jako zastaralé stahovány ze služby Luftwaffe v první linii, kde je nahrazoval typ Henschel 126, naposledy v ní působily při útoku na Polsko. Koncem války byly používány k nočním rušivým náletům na sovětská postavení.

In 1933 a high-winged aircraft He 46C arised. A series production was ordered and altogether 481 pieces including prototypes were manufactured. They were delivered to Luftwaffe units and they served as reconnaissance and training aeroplanes. Twenty He 46C machines were bought in 1936 by general Franco's insurgent forces in Spain. In 1938 the He 46C as by that time absolute machines were withdrawn from first line service in the Luftwaffe, where they were replaced by Henschel Hs 126. For the last time the He 46C were engaged at the attack on Poland. Toward the end of war they were used for night disturbing air raids on soviet positions.
